AeA's Midwest Council Names New Chairman

PCTEL CEO Accepts Position

CHICAGO--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Feb. 28, 2005--AeA, the nation's largest high-tech trade association, announced today that Marty Singer, Chairman and CEO of PCTEL, Inc., will serve as Chairman of its Midwest Council. PCTEL (Nasdaq:PCTI - News), based in Chicago, IL, is a leader in simplifying mobility. As part of this new role, Mr. Singer will also have a seat on AeA's National Board of Directors, which includes high-tech executives from companies like Adobe, Intel, HP, Intuit, TI, Manugistics, Cisco, and others.

"Marty's strong leadership skills and many contributions to the high-tech industry are impressive and will further bolster AeA's presence in the Midwest market," said AeA Midwest Council Executive Director Ed Longanecker. "We are both excited and honored about Marty's decision to lead AeA's Midwest Council." "The AeA's Midwest Executive Committee will advance the agenda of technology companies in the region," said Mr. Singer. "We must address important state and national issues, including the impact of Sarbanes-Oxley. We must also represent the capabilities of the region to the international community and make AeA resources available to small and medium size companies. We have a great opportunity to make a difference," added Singer.

A 20-year veteran of telecom and technology, Mr. Singer served as CEO of SAFCO Technologies and has held executive positions at Motorola and Tellabs. He began his career at Bell Labs.
